Noetive

AI agents plus in-house floor sensors that take over operational decisions such as production planning in plants and logistics; Eclipse-built, one named customer, $41M seed [1,2].

Read first. Five-month-old company built inside its lead investor, Eclipse; the CEO is still listed as Eclipse's Chief AI Officer [1,4]. noetive.ai and most articles could not be opened, so product detail rests on PitchBook and launch-coverage excerpts.

A COMPANY AND PRODUCT

Agents run on top of a customer's existing systems and take over operational decisions, fed by a multimodal sensing pod Noetive designs: an "intelligence of record" [2] CR. Targets: manufacturing, logistics, energy, data centers [2].

B TECHNOLOGY AND DIFFERENTIATION

A core model (the "brain") learns how one operation runs from system data and pod signals; each deployment is meant to improve the shared model [2] CR.

- Not disclosed: whether the brain is a trained model or agents on frontier LLMs, what the pod senses, how many pods are installed UNKNOWN.
- Integration: reads Steuben's system data plus floor conditions [2]; whether agents write plans back to ERP or only advise is not disclosed UNKNOWN.
- Likely moat, if any: operating data (plans, outcomes, floor signals) compounding across sites, plus planner reliance; not the model INF. Own pods add data rivals lack but slow rollout versus software on existing cameras.

C MARKET AND COMPETITION

Wedge: production planning in food and beverage plants, today mostly ERP plus spreadsheets.

- Palantir AIP: production scheduling over ERP, MES and PLM data [6]; the default operational layer.
- Kinaxis: Maestro planning suite adding agents [7]; heavy for mid-size plants.
- Archetype AI: sensor-data foundation model, $35M Series A Nov 2025 [5]; closest on sensing.

D TEAM AND FINANCING

CEO Amir Frenkel: about a decade as Meta VP (GenAI, XR), earlier Google and Amazon [1,3]; Eclipse's Chief AI Officer since April 2026, and Noetive formed inside Eclipse [2]. CPO Dan Barak founded Stackbit (sold to Netlify) after Lyft and Meta [3]. Eclipse led, with eight funds and 11 angels (Bosworth, Al-Dahle, Schroepfer) [1]. No founder with plant operations experience disclosed UNKNOWN.

E COMMERCIAL TRACTION

Sole named customer Steuben Foods (aseptic contract manufacturer): its executive Menachem Katz says planning that ran monthly over a week now runs daily in minutes [2]. Design partnership; paid status, vendor effort unknown UNKNOWN. PitchBook lists revenue, no figures [1].

F PRELIMINARY INVESTMENT PERSPECTIVE

WHAT IS INTERESTING

A customer-quoted week-to-minutes planning gain [2] is a concrete signal at five months. Interesting if it holds without Noetive engineers and transfers to a second plant INF.

WHAT NEEDS VALIDATION

Product versus per-site engineering; and Eclipse dependency (it built the company and employs the CEO [1,2]): check terms, board and room for an outside Series A lead.

LEITMOTIF RELEVANCE

Fits the industrial AI focus. Planning and inbound logistics at Volkswagen Group component plants could match once results extend beyond food INF. No portfolio overlap found.

G THREE QUESTIONS FOR THE INTRODUCTORY CALL

1. At Steuben, which systems do you read and write, who signs off the daily plan, and how many of your engineer-days did it take? Separates product from forward-deployed services.
2. What did your second design partner reuse from the Steuben model, and what was rebuilt? Tests self-improvement.
3. What does the pod capture at Steuben that ERP data missed, and how much gain remains without it? Moat or drag?
